Kaan Pete Roi is Bangladesh's first emotional support and suicide prevention helpline, where anyone can call to get emergency emotional support from our trained volunteers. The purpose of the helpline is to alleviate feelings of frustration, loneliness, mental pressure and suicidal tendencies among people and provide them mental support. With this in mind, Kaan Pete Roi listens to people with confidentiality and empathy with a completely open mind. There are 40 other countries where this type of organization exists, which work towards suicide prevention and improving mental health.

The Department of Educational and Counselling Psychology (DECP) under the faculty of Biological Sciences has its root back in 2006 within the Department of Psychology. Officially, an independent department was created in 2011 with the aim of preparing educational and counselling psychologists in Bangladesh. Advanced knowledge and intensive skill training on applied psychological areas along with institutional orientation through DECP create the opportunity for the prospective graduates to develop expertise in the areas of Educational Psychology and Counselling Psychology.
